Col. Durfee, Att'y Hancock Subjects of Interesting Column

J. Emil Smith is editor-publisher of the Springfield State Journal and he writes a column in his publications titled "Making Conversation."

In the Jan. 27 issue he wrote an interesting piece which dwelt at length with a local man, Atty. L. M. Hancock, and a venerable gentleman from Golconda, Col. Charles Durfee.

Timmo will run the column in its entirety and here it is:

A bit of unheralded drama was enacted in the supreme court chamber on the final day of the court's January term. Central figure was a 91-year-old lawyer.

A case involving property rights had been docketed, and it was to have been argued orally before the court. On the day of the appellants was Attorney Lyndon M. Hancock, of Harrisburg, and representing the appellees were George B. Lee, also of Harrisburg, and Col. Charles Durfee, of Golconda, the 91-year-old attorney. Col. Durfee, due to his age, takes little part in the preparation of cases, the writing of briefs and such, so that part of the Durfee-Lee representation had been left to Lee.

A day or two before the case was to be argued, Attorney Lee was called out of the state, due to the critical illness of his father. Col. Durfee did not have time to notify the opposing lawyer, Hancock, so both of them journeyed to Springfield. Durfee came all the way from Golconda, 200 miles away, his wife driving. When he reached the supreme court building, he advised Hancock of the emergency. When the case was called, Hancock addressed the court thus:

"I did not know until I got here this morning that Attorney Lee had been called away because of his father's illness. I revere and respect Col. Durfee, but I know that he has not been able to inform himself on the matter at bar, therefore an oral argument would be greatly to his disadvantage. He is 91 years old, and though he is a valiant soul, I do not feel it is fair to subject him to the ordeal of an argument with so little preparation. I have talked to him about it and he is willing to waive oral argument and let the court take the case on briefs and abstracts."

Chief Justice George W. Bristow commended Attorney Hancock warmly on his chivalry, then remarked:

"I am sure the court would have enjoyed hearing Col. Durfee."

Col. Durfee, sitting in the rear of the chamber and relying on a hearing aid, obviously heard his name mentioned. Someone close to him, mistaking the chief justice's remark, said to the aged lawyer:

"I think the court expects you to say something."

Col. Durfee rose, walked briskly to the dais where attorneys address the court, thanked the court for its invitation to talk, then extended cordial greetings. With that, he returned to his seat. He was cordially received.

Later, Chief Justice Bristow, who

The union reported officers chosen at a recent run-off election included Harry Rann, Harrisburg, and Harry Wrigley, Collinsville, auditors; Dominic Griva, Bensenville, local co-trustee of the PMWA welfare and retirement fund, and Dominic Molinar, special accountant.

Says Only Way To Meet Needs Of Armed Forces

Ridgway Fears Cuts Will Jeopardize Security of U. S.

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson urged Congress today to extend the draft for four years as the only way to meet manpower needs of the armed forces.

"Experience has shown that we cannot maintain on a voluntary basis the total number of military personnel that are required for the foreseeable future," he said in a statement presented to the House Armed Services Committee.

"As a result we must have the authority to draft any required additional personnel on a short term basis."

The present draft law expires July 1. The administration has asked for a four-year extension.

The Armed Services Committee turned its attention to draft legislation after airing publicly the Pentagon's backstage disagreements over the administration's proposed cuts in Army manpower. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, Army chief of staff, testified Monday that he feared the cuts would jeopardize U. S. security.

Committee Democrats agreed with Ridgway that the Army should not be trimmed in the light of the Formosa crisis, but were not in agreement on how, or whether, they could make President Eisenhower back down.

Would Draft 14,000 Monthly
Asst. Defense Secretary Carter L. Burgess, who presented Wilson's statement to the committee, said about 670,000 men would be drafted in the next four years, or an average of 14,000 a month. That would be in addition to 2,100,000 volunteers in the four-year period to maintain the scheduled force of 2,850,000 men.

Without a draft extension, the armed services could not maintain a strength of more than 1,500,000 men, Burgess told the committee.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director, said about two million men have been drafted since 1950. He said the draft also spurred voluntary enlistments which would drop if it expires.

Local Firms are Low Bidders on Highway Projects

Two Harrisburg construction firms are low bidders on two highway projects set for Saline county this spring, it was announced today at Springfield.

They are the J. D. Barter Construction Co. and the Riley Construction Co.

Barter's bid of $63,468 was low for 1.76 miles of bituminous surface treatment on gravel or crushed stone base on Federal Aid Secondary Route 898 from Harco north.

Riley submitted a low bid of $32,570 for 1.93 miles of gravel or crushed stone surface on Federal Aid Secondary Route 903 from FAS Rt. 898 two miles southwest of Galatia westerly.

Barter also had a low bid for a job in Pope county and the Producers Mining Co. of Harrisburg was low bidder on a Pulaski county project.

Barter's bid was $134,468 for 3.93 miles of bituminous surface treatment on gravel or crushed stone base on FAS Rt. 933 from Pope county to Hamlettsburg, in Pope county, and the Producers Mining Co. bid $150,804 for 5.94 miles of bituminous surface treatment on gravel or crushed stone base on FAS Rt. 937 from New Grand Chain southeasterly to Massac county.

Violinist James de la Fuente, Pianist Herbert Stessin to Give Concert Here

Violinist James de la Fuente and pianist Herbert Stessin, who will appear in Harrisburg under the auspices of the Harrisburg Community Concert association Feb. 3 at 8:15 p. m. in the First Baptist church, have quickly established themselves as popular favorites on the North American concert stage.

When the two young artists merged their talents to form this instrumental ensemble, there was an immediate response by the musical public. The concert duo of violin solos, piano solos and the rewarding combination of the two instruments in ensemble. The large number of cities that has continued to engage these two young artists—and to call them back for repeat performances—is proof of the impact of their playing on the American audiences.

James de la Fuente as a boy was the winner in numerous contests offered by the Federated Music Clubs of America. Upon his graduation with honors he was awarded a six-year fellowship at the Juilliard Graduate school where he began a long association with the late great Albert Spalding. Since his graduation from Juilliard, de la Fuente has become well known to concert audiences throughout America.

The artist plays a Montagnana violin, dated 1723. The instrument was originally in the possession of the celebrated French family of Tallyrand. Albert Spalding purchased it in Paris and on it played his American debut performance and many of his subsequent concert engagements throughout the world. In his will the great violinist bequeathed the instrument to his former pupil and friend, Mr. de la Fuente.

Herbert Stessin auspiciously launched his professional career with a debut recital in New York's Carnegie Hall in December 1950. "He quickly demonstrated a real de la Fuente and Stessin Violin and Piano Duo talent for the keyboard," wrote the critic of the New York Times. Others praised the "polished technique," "assurance and real brilliance of his performances."

Stessin is a native of New York City and holds a degree in music from City college. He began his piano studies at six and has for many years been the pupil and associate of the noted concert pianist Sascha Gorodnitzki.

Begin Action for City Park at Lake Harrisburg

An ordinance setting aside approximately 40 acres of land for a public park on Lake Harrisburg was given first reading this morning by the city council and probably will receive final passage Feb. 15.

The ordinance calls for a choice area on the east side of the lake, which has a lot of shore line.

City Attorney D. F. Rumsey complimented the council for its action, declaring that the first thing the members thought about after a supply of water was doing something for the citizens of Harrisburg in general.

Members of the Harrisburg Water Board, in regular meeting last night, approved plans for a city park on Lake Harrisburg to be known as Harrisburg City Park. The plan was presented by Rumsey of Harrisburg.

As outlined, the park would contain approximately 40 acres, with a part of the acreage lying next to the wide, gravel road running north and south through the lake area. This would make it easily available by automobile.

A 20-acre tract, known as the Barger place, is the northernmost part of the proposed park area and is only three-quarters of a mile from highway 34. This land is fairly level in a north-south direction, but slopes westerly right to the water's edge. The remaining acreage extends south, or towards the lake dam.

A nice, log cabin, above the high water mark, is to be left on the Barger property and would be ideal quarters for a caretaker.

Also discussed this morning was a sanitary garbage collection system for the city and ordinances on cottages and oil drilling on the Lake Harrisburg property.

It was planned to study ordinances already in effect at Benton on the construction of cottages on the lake and on regulating drilling for oil on the city's property.

The city has on hand an ordinance in effect at Olney which is considered a model law on garbage collections and the council plans to use this as a guide in setting up an ordinance here.

Lions Agree to Plan to Take Park Board Out of Politics

A plan to improve the looks and add to the facilities of the town park were discussed at the Lions club meeting Monday evening.

It was revealed that a plan is under discussion to take the park board out of politics, with the various civic groups in Harrisburg working together for the betterment of the park.

"This proposal is not meant to reflect on any member of the park board, either present or past," it was declared. However, it was thought that a park backed by civic organizations would be better for the community.

The Lions voted to support the plan.

Senate Group Approves Hike In Congress Pay

Same Measure Increases Judges, Vice President Pay

By United Press

The Senate Judiciary Committee approved a bill today to hike congressmen's pay from $15,000 to $22,500.

The same bill would increase federal district judges' salaries to $22,500 and would give a $5,000-a-year raise to the speaker and vice president, making their pay $35,000.

The measure also would boost salaries of judges on the Supreme Court, U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, Court of Claims, Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, and Customs, Tax, and Military appeals courts.

Sen. Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.), chairman of a subcommittee that handles the bill, hopes the Senate will pass it in the week of Feb. 21. Sen. William Langer (R-N.D.) said he may fight the bill on the Senate floor. Sens. Price Daniel (D-Tex.) and John L. McClellan (D-Ark.) said they may try to trim the congressional boost.

A similar pay bill is pending in a special house judiciary subcommittee.

Other Congress news:

Postal Pay: Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield asked congressional approval of a 5 percent pay increase for postal workers as a "vital part" of an administration program to make the service more attractive. Other parts of the program include allowances for uniforms, group life insurance, health insurance, unemployment compensation, and an incentive awards system. The whole program, he said, would add 166 million dollars to the department's annual expenses. That is why the administration also is asking increases in postal rates.

Cease-fire: The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted to postpone proposed endorsement of United Nations efforts to get a cease-fire in the Far East. The vote followed a declaration by Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland that there must be no "blanket endorsement of appeasement." President Eisenhower briefed Republican congressional leaders on the Formosa crisis and U. S. military ability to cope with it.

Big Business: Theodore K. Quinn, former vice president of General Electric Co., said growth of giant corporations which perform "like dictatorships" threatens America's political freedoms. He told the Senate-House Economic Committee that independent small businessmen are fighting a "pitiful rearguard" action. He said economic freedoms are in retreat. He added that political freedoms "never long outlast economic freedoms."

Nomination: The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved the nomination of former Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R-Ky.) to be ambassador to India.

Father of Vernard E. Clayton Dies After Heart Attack

David J. Clayton, 88, resident of Benton, passed away today at 3:30 a. m. in the St. Mary's hospital in Evansville, Ind., where he was taken Sunday following a heart attack while visiting in Harrisburg with his son, Vernard E. Clayton.

Mr. Clayton was born in Williamson county to Lambert and Mary Doris Clayton. He was a hoisting engineer for 35 years and served as coroner of Franklin county for 24 years, retiring in the last election.

Mrs. Clayton, the former Mary Duncan, died in 1943. They had lived together for 51 years.

He leaves the following children: Earl of Tucson, Ariz.; Roscoe of Evansville, Ind.; Mrs. Bertha Hartwell, Johnston City, Tenn.; Mrs. Ina, Ill.; Duncan of Union City, Mich.; and Mrs. Pauline Neal of Mt. Vernon. The oldest child, Mrs. Pearl Butler, was fatally injured in the tornado in West Frankfort in 1925. He also leaves eight grandchildren, eight great-grandchildren, and one sister, Mrs. Ola Lawrence of West Frankfort.

The body will lie in state at the Harrisburg funeral chapel tonight and will be taken to Benton tomorrow. Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

ELDORADO OIL ACTIVITY: Town Lot Drilling Brings Problems; Study Pipeline to Take Oil and Gas

By TIMOTHEUS T.

That glow you see in the sky when you look to the northeast from Harrisburg is gas burning up.

Get in your car and drive toward Eldorado and when you've gone two or three miles the scene around Eldorado looks like a prelude to the Millennium.

Those torches, fed by gas from the oil wells, illuminate the sky in the west part of town and areas northwest, northeast and east of the city.

Now that town lot drilling could put a test in about every ten acres, striking oil might mean that they can shut off the street lights, they won't be needed.

But the city is taking steps that will return the town to pre-oil darkness and the chances are that the outlying area also will become a part of the program.

Durham is Guest Speaker at Rotary Meeting

Ray Durham was the guest speaker at the weekly Rotary club meeting held yesterday noon in the Masonic hall dining room. He was introduced by Louie Beltz.

Durham gave an excellent talk on Abraham Lincoln and centered on the phrase "Now he belongs to the ages," spoken of him upon his death. The speaker also read an excerpt from Lincoln's second inaugural address, which, although written for a period nearly 100 years ago, is still very worthy of thought today.

"Few things make men immortal," Mr. Durham said, "and oftentimes it is the simple, kind little things about Lincoln that made him great."

In the absence of President John Foster, vice president Bill Hopkins presided. The group voted to set aside a definite period of time to meet for the program or speaker.

Rites Wednesday for Mrs. Mart Justice

Funeral services for Mrs. Mart Justice who died Sunday at 11 a. m. at her home on North Michigan street, will be held Wednesday at 1 p. m. at the Jones church in the Eagle Creek community.

Rev. Charles Patterson of Karlovic Ridge and Rev. Clifford Potter of Harrisburg will officiate, and burial will be in the Jones church cemetery.

The body now lies in state at the family home.

The city wants to pipe the gas and oil outside the city limits to eliminate the gas flares and the oil trucking and also to pick up a bit of revenue through franchise. Those interested in taking over such propositions say they naturally would gather from the surrounding area as well as the city itself.

Thus, with valves and pipes and pumps occupying only small, insignificant-looking areas where once the derrick stood high, where batteries of tanks on the scene collected the oil, and where the flares meant that gas was burning up, pipelines would take away part of the glamor but would be much more practical.

Getting a pipeline agreement worked out will be one of the major problems of this city council and the one that will be elected to start its job in May. There will be headaches because, reversing the old saying about all that glitters is not gold, it can be said that everything about oil is not glitter.

No, there is hard work, confusion and plenty of headaches.

The city gives permits for town lot drilling and these permits are approved or rejected by the council. The permits sell for $500 and the council members say that isn't too much, considering the way the streets are being torn up by the heavy oil trucks.

At a recent council meeting there attended by this writer an objection was made to a permit that had been issued a week earlier on the grounds that the place staked for the hole was not the place specified. And at the same meeting an application was made for a D. L. Wood and Sons test. There was an attorney present for another operator who objected to the test. The Wood attorney said he had collected a majority of the leases but added that all the title work had not been done. The objector said that his man had a majority of the leases for the town lot drilling bloc. The matter was left in the hands of the city attorney.

There are headaches regarding titles and the lot owners are getting confused, too. They are hearing many stories and are being visited by many persons getting up blocs of leases.

Town lot lease prices started at $6 a lot and have gone steadily up. Last week some property owners were being offered $25 a lot, and a one-eighth override in addition to the customary one-eighth royalty. In some areas the price has risen to $35. Usually there are 40 to 50 persons involved in one of the town lot communized blocs.

The council specifies that one hole can be drilled into each oil formation in each 10-acre bloc and these holes are usually near the center. Sometimes there is objection to certain spots for drilling. But when it is decided on the operator pays damages to the person upon whose property the hole is drilled.

There's a lot of activity right now in Eldorado. Everybody talks oil. Oil tank wagons are moving from storage tank location to location picking up the oil. Big trucks are moving tanks, pipe, rigs. The lease buyer goes from door to door and sets up community meetings to discuss the proposition. The community is hopeful. That is Eldorado.

Soviet Resolution Accuses U. S. Of 'Aggression'

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. — Communist China indicated today it would refuse to send delegates to the United Nations Security Council unless the council took up a Russian resolution accusing the United States of "aggression" in Formosa.

One clue came from a Peiping Radio broadcast demanding that the United Nations junk the New Zealand proposal for a cease-fire in the Formosa strait. Another came from a pro-Communist newspaper in Hong Kong.

The Hong Kong New Evening Post, which "describes itself as independent but usually reflects the Communist line, said "it seems that Peiping will not reject sending representatives" the United Nations.

But it added that acceptance would be based on the Russian resolution and not on the New Zealand one.

The Security Council held up further discussion of the Formosan situation until an official reply is received from Chou En-Lai, the Chinese Communist premier and foreign minister. But Peiping Radio broadcasts announced in advance the reply would be negative.

The Security Council voted 9 to 1 Monday night to invite Red China to New York and an hour later Secretary - General Dag Hammarskjold dispatched a telegram to Chou. The United States voted for the invitation but made it clear its vote did not affect U. S. opposition to Red China membership in the United Nations.

Nationalist China, which voted against inviting Red China, was bitter over the U. N. move.

Little War Continues

The "little war" off the China mainland raged unabated and Communist artillery shelled Tachen Island where the mighty U. S. 7th Fleet, now including five great carriers, stood by ready to remove the Nationalist garrison. Formosa dispatches indicated the evacuation order was being held up in hopes a cease-fire could be obtained first and there would be no conflict between the United States and Red China.

Whether Moscow could influence Red China to accept the U. N. invitation to send observers to New York was an open guess. Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov relayed to Peiping Britain's recommendations that it accept the U. N. invitation. But whether Moscow itself recommended the move was doubtful.

Diplomatic sources in London said there were strong indications Moscow was anxious to avert a head-on collision with America's military might in the Far East although continuing to back Peiping's policy in Formosa.

Pravda, the official Communist Party newspaper in Moscow, reaffirmed today Soviet willingness to discuss "American aggression" in Formosa and "American intervention in the internal affairs of China" but unwillingness to discuss a simple question of a cease-fire.

Communist Misjudgments

Editorial by Bruce Blossat
We can be pretty sure that the Communists have enough spies in this country to report a good deal of valuable information to their masters in Russia and China. But in one vital field these agents either do not report what they could easily detect, or their reports are not believed in Moscow and Peking.

That is the area of American intentions. Of course it is deliberate diplomatic policy to keep them guessing, if we can, as to some of our intentions. For example, how far we might go in helping Chiang Kai-shek defend various Nationalist-held islands close to the Red Chinese mainland.

But we are not trying to fool anybody as to our great intention to avoid war if it can be done without penance. We have no wish to invade Communist lands or any other, no aim to conquer a square inch of foreign soil.

FURTHERMORE, we are among the most unwarlike peoples on the globe. We have never sought armed conflict but have always come to it slowly and reluctantly. That traditional pattern reflects not only high government policy but the national character.

All this any Communist can know with the most cursory study of America. How then does it happen that Chinese Premier Chou En-lai can tell UN Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld, as he apparently has, that he fears the threat of an American-inspired invasion of China's mainland?

Obviously, if any reports of our real attitudes and intentions are getting through, they are being rejected. It begins to seem as if China, like Russia, is suffering from the occupational disease of the wild, unscrupulous propagandist. The Chinese have begun to believe their own propaganda.

The great weakness of the Communist system as a reporting agency is that it insulates itself from the truths of the outside world. This is done consciously to prevent Communist peoples from learning these truths. But almost inevitably the result is to shut the Red leaders off, too. Cooped up in the fact-free hot-house they have built to protect their power, they get a horribly warped picture of world events.

ADD to this the fact that the Chinese as Asiatics are intensely suspicious of Westerners, and that the Russians are not only naturally suspicious of everybody but tend to ascribe to outsiders the same evil tactics of deceit which they have practiced for centuries in the name of diplomacy.

Taken together, all these elements must create a painfully unreal atmosphere in which to weigh the great issues of war and peace. Only against such a backdrop could Chou En-lai seriously believe that the United States would think of invading China.

That this is actually the reverse of our intention affords us little solace. For there is grave peril in these constant Communist misjudgments. One day, acting on such gross misinformation, Moscow or Peking might plunge the world into ruinous war.

Slavery was abolished in the U. S. by the 13th Amendment to the constitution in 1865.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

DREW PEARSON Says: Radford Now Holds Key To Far East War Or Peace; Senators Worry Over Ike's Confidence In Admiral; Radford Famous For Flouting Civilian Authority.

WASHINGTON. — What has chiefly worried senators about the President's resolution for the defense of Formosa is that, despite Eisenhower's earnest intention to reserve for himself the final military decision, nevertheless all military efforts leading up to that decision will be in the hands of a preventive war admiral who has repeatedly flouted civilian authority in the past.

Inasmuch as Admiral Arthur Radford has thumbed his nose at civilian authority during much of his career, the senators wonder whether he will not do it again.

Senate misgivings came to a head when testimony before the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations committees revealed that what the President's resolution calls for is the right of the U. S. military to bomb the Chinese mainland if the Red Chinese concentrate troops alongside Quemoy or opposite any island near the China coast.

In other words, the U. S. military will not wait to go into action until after the Communists start off on the high seas for an invasion of Formosa 300 miles away. Instead the U. S. military can start bombing when the Chinese bring up troops on their own soil opposite any island new held by the Chinese Nationalists.

This was brought out clearly during the Senate interrogation of Secretary of State John Foster Dulles when he was asked:

"Would these strikes against the mainland constitute an act of war?"

"They would," replied Dulles, "but this is no time for legalism."

The senators also pressed Dulles to find out what kind of troop concentration would be necessary on the Chinese mainland to cause the United States to take the initiative in a bombing strike. But the secretary of state passed the buck.

"You'll have to ask the military," he replied, in effect.

All this led to only one conclusion. It would be up to Admiral Radford and the military to decide the question of future peace or war.

This is why former Vice President Barkley shot his pointed question at Secretary Dulles: "Isn't this just a predated declaration of war?"

UNDERCUTS CIVILIANS

While the President's statement reserving authority to himself satisfied many senators, others could not help recalling the career of Admiral Radford, the man who has badgered the White House harder than any other individual to get action around Formosa. They recall that he was in the forefront of some of the most flagrant attempts to undermine civilian authority that have occurred in Washington in years.

It was Radford who, in the fall of 1949, helped to organize the propaganda campaign against the Air Force, thereby spurning the authority of civilian Secretary of the Navy Francis Matthews. This propaganda campaign, which ended in a congressional investigation, set up a secret publicity bureau called "Operation 23," consisting of 12 officers and 17 enlisted men, commanded by a full-fledged naval captain, Capt. Arthur Burke, with Comdr. Thomas Davis second in command.

This underground unit took orders chiefly from Admiral Radford. Its objective was to smear the B-36 and flood newspapers with anti-Army, anti-Air Force propaganda, simultaneous with the circulation of a secret memorandum which claimed that Secretary of the Air Force Stuart Symington and Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson had ordered the B-36 because of personal or monetary gain.

Cedric Worth, a civilian naval employee who later admitted responsibility for the secret memo, was a part of Operation 23.

Another member, Lieut. Sam Ingram, a naval reservist, was summoned for two weeks' active duty and when he reported got a call from Admiral Radford to drop in for a personal visit. The visit lasted two hours, and Lieutenant Ingram remained on permanent duty for a year, turning out cartoons and charts against the Air Force. His salary for that year of sniping at another branch of the armed services was paid by the taxpayer.

RADFORD WOODED IKE

This campaign of military sniping got under way at a meeting of 60 top naval officers in Monterey, Calif., on Sept. 21. Officially the meeting was a routine review of naval problems, but Undersecretary of the Navy Dan Kimball, sensing that something was wrong, took the bull by the horns.

"If you think you're not getting a fair deal," Kimball stated, "then let's speak up."

But no one spoke up. Vice Adm. Gerald Bogan was present; also Admiral Radford. But they looked down their noses. Later, and without telling the undersecretary of the navy, Admiral Bogan wrote his famous letter complaining about naval morale, to which Admiral Radford added a postscript that touched off a powder keg in Washington.

In other words, Admiral Radford at that time completely ignored civilian authority.

Finally, the House Armed Services committee called Radford to testify. His attack on the Air Force was so full of gripes and without constructive remedies that Congressman Paul Kilday of Texas remarked:

"Admiral, I'm disappointed that you didn't come here with an affirmative statement of what the B-36 can do, instead of with a criticism of what the air force is not doing."

It was at this same congressional hearing that Gen. Omar Bradley, then chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, paid his respects to Radford and what he called "Fancy Dan" admirals.

Radford was transferred to the Pacific to keep him from causing trouble in Washington. But after Eisenhower was elected and en route to Korea before his inauguration, the restless Radford flew to two Jima, timed his visit for the exact moment when Eisenhower's plane was to refuel, took the President-elect on a 50-minute leg-stretcher, and during that walk sold like on the idea of supplying Chiang Kai-shek with naval vessels, then turning him loose against the mainland of China. It was Radford's idea that Chiang Kai-shek could harass the Communists, eventually retake part of China.

Eisenhower was so impressed with Radford that he made him chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has been following his policy ever since.

But many senators are worried that Radford's dynamic personality and persuasive influence, plus the "predated declaration of war" contained in the President's resolution, could plunge the United States into war.

Regardless of the President's desire to make final decisions himself, it's the military events leading up to international crises that can make a war, and they don't like to see too much authority in the hands of an ambitious preventive war admiral who has repeatedly shown his scorn for civilian control.

Efforts Began in 1945 to Work Out Cease-Fire in Chinese War, But All Failed

By EARNEST HOBERECHT
United Press Staff Correspondent
TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — The idea of a cease-fire in the China war is not new.

Efforts to work out a cease-fire began as far back as 1945. All failed.

High American officials here, who have studied the situation and who are familiar with the actual facts in the case, are not optimistic about the chances for a cease-fire now.

The Chinese Nationalists are strongly opposed to any such arrangement. So are the Chinese Communists.

But the chances for a cease-fire might prevent them from endeavoring to accomplish their aim of getting back to the mainland.

The Communists say they are opposed to a cease-fire because they are determined to carry out their plans to capture Formosa.

Failure of cease-fire efforts in the past generally has been due to the attitude and actions of the Communists.

In August of 1945, immediately after the Japanese offered to surrender, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek invited Mao Tse-tung to visit him in Chungking.

Chiang sent three cables to Mao before he got an answer. Finally, on August 28, 1945, Mao arrived in Chungking from Yenan.

At the urging of the United States, Nationalist China tried to work out an arrangement for the Communists to come into the government.

From the very first, the demands of the Communists were strong. American officials familiar with the talks said it was obvious from the very first the Reds had launched an aggressive attack. Fighting spread to provinces.

By this time the military strength of the Communists had been greatly increased. The Russians had turned over to the Reds large numbers of guns and great quantities of ammunition taken from the surrendering Japanese forces.

The Communists refused to permit Nationalist troops to take over positions in the north in areas formerly held by the Japanese.

In December, 1945, Gen. George C. Marshall, U. S. special envoy, arrived in Chungking and began his ill-fated efforts to arrange a cease-fire.

The Communists, on Jan. 10, 1946, agreed "in principle" that hostilities should cease—but continued their military operations in violation of the agreement.

As the Russians "withdrew" from Manchuria, they turned area after area over to the Chinese Communists who set up puppet governments and finally in April, 1946, announced "all out" hostilities in Manchuria.

In June, 1946, at the suggestion of Marshall, the Nationalists halted all their military activities. Both sides were to observe a 15-day truce.

On June 8th, 1946, within three hours after the truce went into effect, American military observers reported the Communists violated the cease-fire.

Through American efforts a new truce was worked out and announced on Aug. 9, 1946. But like all others, it did not last long.

Later in the month, Chiang Kai-shek asked Ambassador J. Leighton Stuart to head a committee which was to pave the way for a coalition government.

U. S. Abandons Efforts

On Oct. 8, 1946, Marshall and Stuart declared in a joint statement that the Communists had refused a 10-day truce and that Chou En-lai, who was representing the Reds, had refused to return to Nanking to resume negotiations.

On Jan. 29, 1947, the State Department announced the abandonment of American efforts to mediate. The next day Communist spokesmen announced the decision of the Reds to impose their political demands on the government by "force of arms."

In April of 1949, a Nationalist delegation flew to Peiping to discuss peace with the Communists. Again the efforts failed.

In 1949, the Chinese Nationalist government filed a complaint in the U. N. General Assembly against Russia, accusing the U. S. S. R. of aiding the Chinese Communists in the civil war and violating the Sino-Soviet treaty of 1945 and the charter of the United Nations.

On Oct. 1, 1949, the Communists set up their regime in Peiping under the leadership of Mao Tse-tung.

American sources here said cease-fire suggestions came up

More than new

Tried and true

Ford's 162-h.p. Y-block V-8 and 182-h.p. Y-block Special V-8 now offer new Trigger-Torque power!

When you Test-Drive Ford's new Trigger-Torque power you're in for a thrilling surprise. For here is power that can get you moving in split seconds . . . and give you safety-fast passing ability. It has actually been measured that it takes the rear wheels as little as 7/100 of a second to react to your touch on the gas pedal. Such Go-power can come only from engines which are more than merely new—more than ordinary V-8 engines. And that's exactly what these Ford engines are. They are the result of the most advanced V-8 engineering a result of Ford's experience in building more V-8 engines than all other makers combined have ever built!

Ford's 1955 engine news resulted from 23 years' experience building over 14,000,000 V-8 engines

In 1932 Ford introduced the V-8 engine to the low-price field. And it was only just recently that other makers in Ford's field adopted this kind of engine—23 years later. Yet it is interesting to note that the majority of costlier cars were offering V-8's some time ago.

Ford's V-8 experience has never paid off better than this year. Now you can enjoy the ultimate in "Go" new Trigger-Torque power. Now you get the greater smoothness of Ford's rigid deep-block design. Now you gain the savings of higher compression ratios. Now you gain the power of the biggest Ford car engines ever.

Come in. Take your Test Drive today. Ford has much more to offer that's new. You'll find beautiful Thunderbird-inspired styling—comfortable new Angle-Poised Ride, to name just a few.

Former Local Girl Appreciates Polio Contributions

Do the pennies, nickels, dimes and dollars given each year to the March of Dimes really help those stricken with polio?

"You bet they do." That's the reply given to the question by Miss Lavonne Newton, Gary, Ind., a former Harrisburg girl.

Miss Newton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Newton, who left Harrisburg several years ago but returned often to visit with relatives and friends, has been a polio patient since early September of last year.

A recent issue of The Gary Post-Tribune carried a feature story and pictures regarding Miss Newton, who was stricken with polio early in September, 1954.

She is now able to spend part of each day out of the iron lung on a specially constructed rocker bed and is taken by wheel chair to physical therapy treatments.

Treatment to date has amounted to $4,000, the story reveals, with $3,000 being paid from Infantile Paralysis funds. The remaining $1,000 was paid from insurance policies.

Miss Newton, 20 years of age, is high in her praise for the work being done by the Infantile Paralysis chapters, financed through the March of Dimes funds.

"If it hadn't been for the donations to last year's drive and to previous drives, it is pretty certain that I and the other polio patients would not be enjoying the care we are now receiving. Without these generous gifts, we might have to spend the rest of days as hopeless, unhappy cripples," Miss Newton stated.

She is a niece of Mrs. George Ferrell and Mrs. Fred Turton of Harrisburg.

Hundreds Cheer Princess Margaret at Trinidad as Caribbean Tour Begins

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (U.P.) — Hundreds of Britons, American tourists and Trinidad citizens raised a welcoming cheer today when Britain's Princess Margaret alighted on this island of orchids and whistling frogs to open her Caribbean tour.

The princess officially set foot on new world soil for the first time in her 24 years when she came down the gangway of the American-built Stratocruiser Canopus at the end of a 28-hour, 5,000-mile flight from London.

How had she spent the flight? She told Sir Miles Thomas, chairman of the British Overseas Airways Corp., the answer to that one before she left London—she planned to finish her "homework" for the tour.

He quoted her as saying: "I shall spend most of the trip catching up with my reading. I still have some of my homework on the islands to finish."

Maj. Gen. Sir Hubert Rance, 56-year-old veteran of Dunkirk and governor of oil and sugar-rich Trinidad and neighboring Tobago since 1950, welcomed the princess when she landed at Piarco Airport.

An honor guard of native soldiers snapped to attention while a military band played.

The governor gave a brief welcoming address, the princess made a brief reply, and then local digni-ties and their wives stepped forward to be presented to her.

After the end of the half-hour welcoming ceremony the princess was to take a leisurely two-hour state drive to Government House, with several stops or slow-downs scheduled on the way.

Illinois Co-Ed Excited After Visit with Prince

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (U.P.) — Pretty Jo Ann Stork, the 20-year-old University of Illinois co-ed who came to this principality to meet Prince Rainier III, walked with her Prince Charming in his zoological garden today.

She breathlessly accepted from him a gold medallion as a memento of her visit.

Jo Ann, flushed with excitement, wore a rose-colored dress for her long-awaited meeting with the handsome bachelor prince.

And Monaco's citizens were nearly as excited as she. Unless the prince marries and has children, this wealthy Riviera gambling resort will be taken over by France.

That will mean payment of French taxes. At present the Monacans are tax free.

Today Jo Ann rushed, at the prince's bidding, to his yellow stone palace overlooking the blue Mediterranean. She had waited beside her phone all day Monday without receiving his anticipated invitation.

After her two-hour meeting with the prince she said she had sipped champagne with him and had found him to be "just like an American boy."

"He is even more handsome than I had expected," she said.

"His mustache is beautiful. It's all just so thrilling. I don't know what to say."

Disclose Plot To Free Felons From Sing Sing

OSHSING, N. Y. (AP) — Warden Wilfred Denno told today of a fantastic plot to free at gunpoint every felon in the Sing Sing Prison death house by torturing the warden's wife.

Details of the desperate scheme, disclosed in a copyrighted story by the New York Daily News, called for "outside" thugs to seize Denno and his wife in their home near the prison.

The desperadoes then planned to torture and beat the warden's wife and threaten her with death until Denno agreed to help a gunman pass through the prison gates and into the death house.

"The scheme . . . was doomed to failure from the very beginning," Denno told the United Press.

A death house inmate, who apparently hoped to receive clemency, told of the plot last summer. However, the conspiracy was not made public until prison officials and detectives conducted a thorough investigation.

The Daily News said the plot centered around the three murderers of a Reader's Digest messenger who are to be executed Feb. 21.

The first tip on the planned mass break came, the News said, from Romulo Rosario, 37, whose record includes arrests for drug peddling, compulsory prostitution and murder.

The newspaper said Rosario produced a note outlining the escape plan. Handwriting experts traced the writing to another condemned man, John D. Green, who was later executed.

The plot was called off, police believe, after fellow inmates of Rosario became suspicious over his frequent visitors. One by one, four of the original eight plotters went to the electric chair, the News said.

Although Denno took all precautions to prevent the planned break, he said today that Rosario may have reported the alleged plot to obtain clemency.

Corn Planting Restrictions Eased by Gov't

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Agriculture Department Monday eased corn planting restrictions for this year's crop, allowing about an 8 percent increase over 1954.

The department allotted 49,242,697 acres to be planted to corn in the 805-county commercial corn producing area in 21 states.

The 1954 crop corn allotment was 46,995,504 acres in a 22-state, 834-county commercial area last year. Actual 1954 plantings in the commercial area were estimated at about 55,000,000 acres.

The most corn in the commercial area is fed directly to livestock, many farmers ignore the allotment. The only penalty for violation is loss of federal price supports on corn. Experts think that compliance last year was about 40 percent and that it might be the same this year.

(Acreage allotments for 101 counties in Illinois total 8,172,895).

About Town And Country

studied law in Metropolis some 35 years ago, before his admission to the bar, said:

"When I was a student, Charles Durfee was one of the most widely known lawyers in southern Illinois. He was especially noted as a trial lawyer."

Col. Durfee, as mentally alert as a youngster, chatted with an old friend or two around the supreme court building.

"They have found a mountain of lead, zinc and fluorspar near my home," he said, "on land where I used to hunt 70 years ago."

Golconda, the home of Col. Durfee, is the seat of Pope county. It sits on the banks of the Ohio river, in that picturesque segment of southeastern Illinois where the Illinois Ozarks end, after crossing the state. It is in the midst, also, of the Shawnee National Forest, where fire towers abound, and where there is a year around watch for forest fires. It is sturdy, stable country, and no one could better personify the rugged atmosphere of it than Col. Durfee. Younger men might have dodged the 400 mile round trip drive to Springfield, but not Col. Durfee. It was an emergency, and Col. Durfee, despite his years, rose to it.

12 Burn to Death In Tenement Fire

AMSTERDAM, N. Y. (AP) — At least 12 persons, 11 of them children, were trapped and burned to death today when a spectacular fire raced through a brick-frame tenement building.

Firemen said an exploding oil stove touched off the fire.

Among the dead were a Puerto Rican father and five of his children.

Eight bodies had been removed from the smoldering ruins by mid-morning. Police and firemen searched for the missing.

Powell Warns Remap Must Be Fair, Equitable

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Former Speaker Paul Powell warned the Illinois House today "we're all going to eat out of the same spoon" when it comes to drawing a new map of legislative districts.

The Vienna Democrat pledged he will work for a plan that will be "fair and equitable" to every area — but he's not going to have his own district boundaries changed if others aren't.

"I care not where they put Paul Powell," he told the House. "But all of these districts are going to be redistributed, if I've got anything to do with it."

Powell took the floor on a point of personal privilege to answer newspapers which criticized him for making a motion to expel a reporter and a civic group representative from a meeting of the House Committee on Reapportionment last Tuesday.

The House set up the committee to work on details of a plan to redistrict the House. Reapportionment of both houses is required by the constitutional amendment okayed by the voters last Nov. 2.

Powell said he favors continued closed sessions by the special committee. He said the group "is not going to get very far" unless it meets in executive session "until it has something to report."

Ray Schalk, 'Home Run' Baker Voted To Hall of Fame

NEW YORK (AP) — Ray Schalk and Frank (Home Run) Baker, two stars of baseball's 1910s and '20s, were voted into the Hall of Fame Monday by the Committee on Veterans.

Schalk, who is 62, played 17 seasons for the Chicago White Sox and was known as the "iron man" catcher of his day.

Baker, now 68, was a star third baseman of the Philadelphia Athletics, famed "million dollar infield." He later played six seasons with the New York Yankees.

The Committee on Veterans is a special 11-man board which meets every two years and selects "old-timers" for baseball's shrine at Cooperstown, N. Y. The "old-timers" category covers players who have been out of baseball for at least 25 years, and managers and umpires who have been retired for at least five years.

Georgia Tech Again Upsets Kentucky, 65-59

By United Press
Georgia Tech's "Iron Men" did it again.

On their own court at Atlanta, Ga., Monday night, the Iron Men — who sprang basketball's biggest upset of the season on Jan. 8 by beating Kentucky, 59-58 — did it again and did it more impressively in an astonishing 65-59 triumph over the nation's No. 1 team.

"It's the greatest thing I ever saw," whooped jubilant Tech Coach J. C. (Whack) Hyder. "That is, it's the greatest thing since Jan. 8."

Kentucky has been on fire for revenge ever since Tech, using only five players for the entire game, scored that first surprise at Lexington, Ky. — smashing Kentucky's 129-game home court winning streak and 32-game all-games winning streak.

But this time Tech led all the way, sometimes by as much as 14 points, and cruised easily to victory despite Kentucky's all-court press throughout the entire second half. Again, Tech used only five players—with one change from the first game because of the absence of injured Lenny Cohen, the team's ace rebounder.

Little Joe Helms, whose push shot with three seconds to play beat Kentucky the first time, was the sparkplug of the Tech attack and its leading scorer with 24 points. Tech jumped off to a 3-0 lead before Kentucky scored, rolled to a 32-24 halftime bulge, and then held on despite Kentucky's frantic all-court press.

Rupp Needed Time
"If it had gone on a few minutes more, we would have had them," said dejected Coach Adolph Rupp of Kentucky. "We were going fine in the last five minutes."

Actually, Kentucky collected 27 field goals to Tech's 20, and in the bargain, grabbed 43 rebounds to Tech's 34. But the free throw figures were fatal for the Wildcats: Tech sank 25 of 34, Kentucky only five of 15.

The loss, only the second for Kentucky in 14 games, cost the Wildcats a chance to take over the Southeastern Conference lead. Instead of moving ahead of Alabama, which suffered its first league defeat, 76-74, to Florida, Kentucky dropped to fourth place.

"Those foul shots hurt us," admitted Rupp.

Hyder said his boys played for the breaks, "waiting until we got the good shot," whereas Kentucky "wanted to win so badly they made mistakes."

Fined
J. A. Scott of Mt. Vernon, Ind., was arrested on Route 45 south of Eldorado last night by Deputy Sheriff James S. Lyon, who charged him with reckless driving and illegal transportation of liquor. Scott pleaded guilty to the charges before Justice of the Peace Wilbur Leitch at Eldorado and was fined a total of $75.40.

Justice Dep't, IBC Prepare for Anti-Trust Suit

NEW YORK (AP)—Rival attorneys for the Justice Department and the International Boxing Club went into training today for the big anti-trust fight of the year, which was arranged by the U. S. Supreme Court's "green light" decision.

The historic clash is expected to start "some time before July 1," according to Richard B. O'Donnell, chief of the New York office, Anti-trust Division of the Department of Justice.

O'Donnell said, "We will try to get into court as soon as possible" with the government's anti-trust suit against the International Boxing Club and its associates.

In Washington Monday, the Supreme Court opened the road for O'Donnell and his assistants to press their anti-trust suit against the IBC clubs of New York and Chicago by declaring that professional boxing is subject to the anti-trust laws.

The court refused to classify boxing in the same category as professional baseball, which has been legally exempt from anti-trust laws since 1922. The Supreme Court reversed last year's decision of Federal Judge Gregory F. Noonan of New York, who ruled that boxing was not subject to the anti-trust laws, any more than baseball.

Promoter Jim Norris, chief target of the government's suit, is in Florida; but he issued a statement through his New York and Chicago offices expressing his confidence that the government's anti-monopoly suit will not be successful.

He said: "We are confident that in presenting seven or eight championship bouts a year, we do not operate an illegal monopoly within the meaning of the Sherman Act."

The government's first suit on March 17, 1952, against Norris and Arthur Wirtz of the IBC, and against the Madison Square Garden Corp. and other defendants, charged the defendants tied up the major champions and contenders with exclusive contracts, that they had exclusive control of the principal arenas, and that they prevented other promoters from competing in the promotion of championship bouts.

At present, the IBC has exclusive contracts with the six champions from heavyweight through featherweight. However, the IBC does permit those champions to engage in non-title bouts for other promoters.

Michigan State stopped cold a late Purdue rally to gain a 79-72 decision and maintain a first division tie with the Wildcats who also have a 4-3 league record.

Two other Big Ten cage teams went into action Monday night to score intersectional victories, Indiana turning back Butler, 87-65, in a romp, and Ohio State trimming St. John's of Brooklyn, 67-61.

Leading Minnesota Idle
Leader Minnesota, which will not resume its basketball wars until next Monday, remained idle as did second-place Iowa and third-place Illinois.

Northwestern was troubled only in the final five minutes of the first half against Michigan when the Wolves tied the score five times before dropping behind to stay.

Ehmann, leading a spirited offensive, netted 18 points in the first half and 20 after the intermission, hooping 16 field goals and six free throws. He topped the record of 36 points set by Ray Ragelis and also cracked a field-house record of 32 which he shared earlier with Dick Garmaker of Minnesota.

Ehmann's sharpshooting advanced him to third place among conference scoring leaders, giving him 193 points in seven games for a 27.6 mark.

Michigan State's Fourth Win
Teammates Harold Grant and Dick Mast, sophomore guard, poured in 23 and 22 points respectively for the Wildcats while Paul Groffsky netted 22 points in Michigan's losing cause.

Michigan State's fourth conference win came on the home court as did its previous three. Forward Julius McCoy was the Spartan pace-setter, scoring 22 points to help the winners' game-long lead.

Sparked by guard Maurice Morzen and forward Joe Sexson, the Boilermakers erupted in a late-stage rally that pulled them to within 4 points of the Spartans with 1:12 minutes remaining.

The Spartans tightened up and managed to draw enough fouls to clinch the contest from the free throw line. Sexson, with 14 points was high man for the losers who matched Michigan State with 29 baskets but fell down in the free throw department.

Frank Ehmann, with 38 Points Leads Northwestern In 96-81 Win Over Michigan

CHICAGO (AP)—Northwestern and Michigan State tightened their deadlock on fourth place in the Big Ten basketball scramble today as each scored a conference victory while the three topflights remained idle.

The Wildcats pounced on Michigan for a 96-81 victory as Frank Ehmann enjoyed one of his hottest shooting nights of the season, bagging 38 points for both a McGraw fieldhouse and school scoring mark.

Michigan State stopped cold a late Purdue rally to gain a 79-72 decision and maintain a first division tie with the Wildcats who also have a 4-3 league record.

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Rockford West held No. 1 billing in the United Press poll of the state's top 15 prep basketball teams again today for the fifth straight week.

All but two of the 15 coaches on the U. P. board picked the Warriors, beaten but once in 15 games, as the state's best team. They got 223 of a possible 225 points.

The other two first-place votes went to Pinckneyville and Princeton.

Edwardsville climbed one rung to No. 8 and East St. Louis moved up from 11th to ninth. Decatur made the week's biggest advance, from 13th to 10th.

Thornton of Harvey, which split two weekend games, slipped from No. 8 spot to 11th. Alton fell two notches to 12th. Elgin, No. 15 a week ago, ranked 13th, and Pekin dropped from 12 to 14 after an upset loss to Canton.

HTHS Freshmen Beat Eldorado

The Harrisburg freshman basketball team defeated the Eldorado freshman team, 69-45, at Daventry gym last night after dropping a preliminary contest of freshmen to Eldorado, 40-38, in two overtimes.

In the main tilt Harrisburg led all the way, 10-6 at the quarter, 31-16 at halftime and 49-29 at the end of the first period. Ray Hassett had 20 points, Bob Clark 11, Don Biggs 10, Lloyd Banks 6, Jerry Hicks 6, Ira Logan 6, Mickey Stone 4, Zan Hefner 4 and Jon Frohock 2.

Harrisburg led 8-5 at the end of the first quarter in the preliminary but Eldorado was out in front 19-14 at halftime. The third quarter ended with Harrisburg ahead 28-27 and the score at the end of the game was 35-35. First overtime period ended 38-38 and in the sudden death second overtime Eldorado hit for a basket to win.

In this contest Hicks and Frohock had 10 each, Hefner 7, Stone 5, Banks 4 and Logan 2.

Coach Jim McKee was hampered by the illness of two of his first stringers, Bill Yates and Eddie Price.

The locals got to Benton for a single game Thursday night.

Former Local Youth Has Career as Professional Boxer

Jimmy Lewis
Jimmy Lewis, former local youth, is doing well as a professional boxer.

The 22-year-old boxer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. McKinley Lewis of Harrisburg. His real first name is Charles.

Lewis lived here with his parents until he was about eight years old, when his parents moved to South Bend, Ind. The parents have since returned to Harrisburg to reside.

The young boxer took up fighting in the army and since his discharge has been living in St. Paul, Minn. A lightweight, he has lost but one fight since turning pro, the mother said.

Looking At Sports
By BILL MELTON

Sad But True! The 1954-55 basketball season is rolling right along. This is the first of February and all regular season play will be completed before the month ends. In fact, tournaments will be in full swing.

With the season rapidly coming to an end, many fans are discussing prospects for next year. All schools in Saline county will be hit by graduation, but also will have many of the stars of this season back for at least one more try.

Of all the schools in this area that I have seen play, McLeansboro seems to have the brightest prospects. If not in 1955-56, then for sure the following year.

I know that looking two years ahead is risky business, but that fine group of sophomores at McLeansboro holds bright promise for the next couple of seasons.

Sloan, Hall and Gately are starters and the bench is loaded with more second year players that are bound to make a coach rub his hands gleefully just thinking of the future.

In my opinion, Sloan can't fail to attain stardom.

We will resume the "you pick 'em" again this week. There is nothing to buy and no prize if you win. Just good fun and a chance to test your knowledge.

Circle the name of the team you think will win and jot down a score for the game of the week. All entries must be postmarked not later than Thursday evening. Be sure and give name and address.

Fight The Wild River

Current pulled and sucked against the General Heath until Crotch slid her against a rotting wharf in a manner that spoke of long experience. The shoaling river channel before La Paz was all that kept the larger Navigation steamboats from pulling in at the landing. A wave of bitter irritation brushed him as he silently admitted Jamison could probably have broken him long ago if it hadn't been for the gravel spits that piled up so persistently.

Ever since the damage to Amador Jamison had been using the company's second largest packet, the Claramore. Two other shallow-draft San Francisco paddle-wheelers had been brought under his pennant, but Claramore remained flagship of the fleet.

Crotch was aware of Goss entering the pilothouse, but his attention was centered on the wharf where he recognized three people. One took predominance over the others, set his heart to strangely strumming. Queenie Dreyfus! How long it had been since that day she stood in this pilothouse, the day Jamison had set them high and dry on a sandbar. For him she had said many strange things that day. He had often pondered on it since, and wondered if she hadn't made him a quiet offer. A suggestion behind her quiet words, had he risen to her subtly hidden meanings, which might have written the end to Dreyfus' dreams?

Goss' voice broke in brusquely. "You see who's waitin'! Sugar Logan! You always took him as a friend. But me, I figure that's something to be stretched two ways. Hark the time he ran out after turnin' the barges over to Jamison? A cute, smooth fellow."

"Then there's Shelby Calhoon. Any time you see him you're lookin' at trouble. He never was any good except with cards, even when he worked as officer aboard the Amador. So he tries his hand at minin'."

"Besides them there's Queenie without her husband. What would Dreyfus say, seein' her standin' beside Calhoon? We had her on this boat a couple days and even China Boy was fetchin' tea and biscuits."

"You notice China Boy's galley these days?" Crotch asked, shoving to one side the rough thoughts Goss uttered. "Blame me if he's not cleaning up. Linda Wong is sending him letters."

"If he talks her into sailin' back from China," Goss said bluntly, "we've got to find us a new cook."

Queenie Dreyfus was waiting beside Calhoon on the main deck. There was no doubt about it they were together. Calhoon carried a gripase in one hand; it was obviously heavy. Goss's description had been apt; in his black suit and beaver hat, Calhoon looked more like a gambler than anything else.

Queenie was dressed in her buckskin skirt, which by now had become ragged, and a woolen coat made shabby by desert camps. It was the same skirt she had worn months ago when the General Heath had dropped her off at La Paz.

"We'd like to book downriver," Calhoon said, and he was leering slightly, his lips withdrawn from his white teeth. "That is, if you have no objections to a former Navigation man."

"All right," Crotch conceded. There was a pause while Calhoon gave him a keen glance. "Cal Dreyfus is dead. Queenie has sold out her claim." His hand automatically brought forward the gripase, and Crotch realized it was filled with gold. And heavy. "We're going to Fort Yuma," Queenie quickly told him. "I've had enough of the hills."

Calhoon was grinning. "I expect to talk her into marryin' me."

So far as Crotch knew, Dreyfus had been alive on his last downriver run a month ago. It was fast work for Queenie. Entirely too fast for a woman whose husband had not yet cooled in the frozen earth. Subconsciously he heard himself saying, "We've got only one stateroom."

"One will do," Queenie gave him a narrow-eyed look. "Mr. Calhoon will make out somehow. Really, Shelby, you shouldn't have said what you did about getting married. There's nothing definite about the gold, Captain Crotch. I made a tidy haul." She was unemotional, her face as bland as Calhoon's. And yet he read struggle at work beneath the surface, and her voice dropped. "I'll want to see you later. It's not the way it looks."

Sugar Logan dropped a hand against his arm. "Don't bother trying to track down that gunman, if that's what you're thinking. A man for breakfast nearly every morning, and no one ever catches the killer. That's what La Paz has come to right now."

(To Be Continued)

All of Crotch's foreboding crystallized with the shot. He said sharply, "You'd better get into a stateroom. Use No. 3—and stay inside till we cast loose!"

"On my way, Captain," Calhoon smiled back recklessly. He made a lunge for the deck ladder. Queenie made an empty gesture with her hands. "It must be

Group May Ask Higher School Taxes

Illinois Commission To Re-Evaluate Question of Financing

SPRINGFIELD (UP)—The Illinois School Problems Commission plans to "re-evaluate the whole question of school financing" at its next meeting Feb. 13.

The commission held lengthy afternoon and night sessions Monday, with strong hints it will make a new recommendation requiring both higher local and state taxes to support growing school enrollments.

Members of the commission expressed resentment toward reaction that followed their Dec. 30 recommendation for an "austerity" program cutting the rate of state aid in some districts. They also were stung by Gov. William G. Stratton's rejection of their program.

Some members said the commission should give up attempts to work out the best possible formula with the money available, and should return to recommending an "ideal" program that would give schools all the money they need.

Wants Workable Formula

But Rep. Charles W. Clabaugh (R-Champaign), commission chairman, said the body should continue to seek a workable school aid formula.

"We are recommending a commission but we are also an action commission and the leadership will have to come to this commission to write a bill," Clabaugh said.

Clabaugh said the Stratton administration first told him only 30 to 35 million dollars more would be available for school aid in 1955-57. Then, after the commission had drawn its "austerity" formula to fit this figure, the governor announced he could find money for more state aid.

Clabaugh said he has since "been unable to find out" how much more money the governor thinks will be available for the next two years.

Denies Disagreement Exists

Sen. Homer Butler (R-Marion) objected to reports that the School Problems Commission wanted to give the schools less money than the governor thought was available.

"We are not at loggerheads with the governor on the question of school aid, but our action and the governor's statements as reported in the press certainly left that impression," Butler said.

Members recalled that the commission had said the minimum level for a "realistic foundation program" would be $230 per pupil per year.

This is $57 per pupil higher than the $173 guaranteed qualifying schools in 1953-55. The commission's Dec. 30 recommendation was to raise the level to $181 per pupil, but also hike the local tax rate to qualify for aid.

Chicago and other high-value property school districts objected, stating such a financing formula would cost them millions in aid.

Largest atoll in the Pacific is Christmas Island, south of Hawaii. Its discovery on Christmas Eve, 1777, by Captain James Cook, accounts for its name.

Red Artillery, Planes, Batter Nationalist Islands; Increase Invasion Fears

TAIPEI, Formosa (UP)—Red Chinese warships, planes and artillery battered Nationalist held Yushan and Tachen islands today, raising fears the Communists may be preparing another invasion attempt.

Nationalist Chinese sources said the most serious threat, an attack on Yushan, 30 miles north of Tachen, by a force of four Red warships, was beaten back in an artillery duel by the island's defenders.

Tachen itself was attacked by eight Red MIG15 jets and by artillery bombardment from the recently captured Yikiangshan Island.

Invasion fears were raised by Nationalist intelligence reports of heavy Red troop concentrations and massed landing craft on the nearby Communist mainland.

Nationalist Chinese bombers struck enemy forces north of Tachen and hit a large Communist supply ship with bombs, rockets and machinegun fire, leaving the 2,000-ton vessel badly crippled and sinking.

"Fight To Death" Orders

The Defense Ministry said a convoy of American-built landing ships carrying civilians, wounded and prisoners of war would arrive at the northern port of Keelung today from Tachen.

However, there was no official word yet on when the evacuation of the Nationalist garrison would begin. The ministry said the Garrison's orders were still to fight to the death if attacked.

The mightiest American naval force assembled since the Korean war stood off northern Formosa ready to help once the word is flashed from Washington. The 7th Fleet included five big carriers and Singapore reported the 45,000-ton carrier Midway passed there at full steam on its way to Formosa, three days ahead of schedule.

A high American official said the fleet was delaying evacuation of the Tachens because the United States hopes a cease-fire in the Formosa Strait will permit a peaceful withdrawal without the danger of a major war.

Awaiting U. S. Decision

American officials said the delay in removing the 10,000 Nationalist troops and 20,000 civilians from the Tachens, 200 miles north of Formosa, was not due to any stand taken by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

The officials said there was no doubt the Nationalists still were trying to get the Americans to make a definite public commitment regarding Quemoy Island, 300 miles south of the Tachens, and Matsu, midway between, but that this was not the main factor delaying the evacuation.
